

If flying for the Airlines is your dream, you will need an Airline Transport Pilot License (ATPL). This is the highest level qualification for your pilot's Licenses. Your Airline Transport Pilot License allows you to captain aircraft weighting over 5700 kg.

For this License there are 6 SACAA subjects that you need to pass, with a minimum pass rate of 75%.

The Subjects are as follows:

- Navigation General
- Meteorology
- Aircraft Technical & General
- Flight Planning
- Instruments
- Radio Aids

To qualify for your ATPL you will require 1500 hours of flying experience which includes:

- 250 hours as Pilot-in-Command, which includes 75 hours of Instrument Flying and 100 Night hours Pilot-in- Command
- You must hold a valid Class I Medical Certificate.
- Subjects can be completed as soon as you have received your CPL.
- After passing your last ATPL subject you have 5 years to complete your flying hours.

The Airline Transport Pilot License is the main requirement for entering the Airlines as a pilot.
